Russell Mason M.Ed.

Academic Coordinator, Bachelor of Applied Management, Federation University Australia & Senior Lecturer, Management & SHRM at TAFE QLD Brisbane.

story

Т

I'm a passionate advocate for adult learners who have to juggle work, study and family responsibilities during their educational journeys.

As a corporate consultant, I'm a specialist in tailoring learning solutions to business needs with integrated, project-based learning and assessment strategies.

I'm currently a PhD candidate researching the nature of learning cultures in organisations and how those cultures impact workers who are studying.

BAM structure at TAFE Qld

Questions for participants

- What are your lessons learned?
- People must be matched to the requirements of the role if they are to be successful
- What is SHRM all about in practice?
- The appropriate utilisation of resources to deliver organisational objectives under challenging circumstances
- What are the challenges and opportunities for agile and informed HR practitioners in modern organisations?
- Innovation in work practices that benefit the organisation while delivering real value to workers
- Did your actions support your mission statement?
- Not always it was difficult to remain focussed at times
- Did you live your values in your behaviours?
- Not always the work was not evenly distributed and contributions varied

Feedback and continuous improvement

- Participants commented that the strategy was engaging and made the concepts "REAL"
- The insights from the observers was both interesting and instructive
- In future the use of software that will allow remote students to participate in the workshop will further enhance the experience for all.

Student comments:

"I feel the learning outcome of the ROWE workshop is definitely necessary in today's modern and dispersed world. Whilst the concept of the workshop was unique and challenging, it's execution on the night fell short of its full potential. Though students mainly communicated through electronic means, close proximity meant they could 'bend the rules' and communicate in person; though non-verbally. In hindsight, breaking the groups up further and relocating them to other tables, would have improved the process, and the outcome would have been better aligned to the desired learning."
