

PROFESSIONAL EDITING OF RESEARCH THESES

The following statement appears in the FedUni HDR Examination Procedure:

Editing of a Thesis

It is expected that the academic supervisors of higher degree by research candidates will provide their students with editorial advice relating to matters of substance and structure; language (including matters of clarity, voice and tone, grammar, spelling and punctuation, specialised and foreign material); and use of illustrations and tables. They may also assist with copyediting and proofreading.

Candidates may use a professional editor in preparing their thesis for submission, but they should notify their principal supervisor of their intention to do so. Professional editorial assistance should be restricted to copyediting and proofreading. In relation to matters of substance and structure, the professional editor may draw attention to problems, but should not provide solutions.

The Australian Council of Graduate Research (ACGR), of which FedUni is a member, also supports professional editing of HDR theses under certain circumstances. The ACGR refers students/supervisors to the Institute of Professional Editors Limited (IPEd) website for further information: http://iped-editors.org/About\_editing/Editing\_theses.aspx.

FedUni does not have any preferred professional thesis editors. The IPEd website has links to a directory of editors which can be searched to find an editor whose services and skills match your particular needs: http://iped-editors.org/Find\_an\_editor.aspx.
