1: Introduction

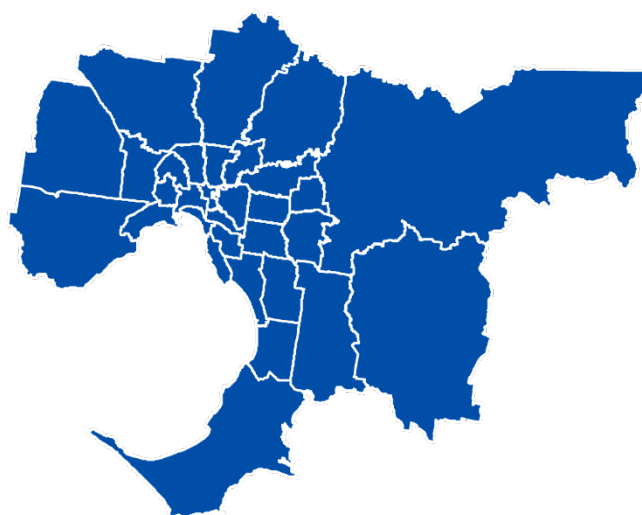

This Report has been produced for training providers by the Department of Education and Training, and summarises vocational education and training (VET) needs for the Metropolitan Melbourne region.

This year's Report also provides an overview of the Victorian labour market and its recovery from COVID-19 to date, as well as providing insights into longer-term employment trends. While signs are positive, there continues to be uncertainty and challenges for the longer-term path to economic recovery, as Victoria continues to respond to COVID-19 outbreaks and closed international borders.

As such, this Report provides some of the broader context, challenges and trends that training providers should consider, in addition to the usual factors, when thinking about future training needs for specific occupations in the Metropolitan Melbourne region.

As always, this Report should be considered in conjunction with the Funded Course List and Funded Skill Set List for 2022, which lists courses available for government subsidy and targets those courses that will yield the most value to the Victorian economy and community. The Funded Course List and Funded Skill Set List for 2022 will assist training providers to align their proposed delivery in 2022 with government objectives for the Victorian TAFE and training system.

HOW TO USE THIS REPORT

Section 2: Victorian labour market context and outlook provides an overview of the labour market and longer-term outlook for occupations in the Metropolitan Melbourne region.

Section 3: Occupations in demand and skills required for Victoria shows courses that contribute to the training and skill requirements of different occupations, particularly those linked to government objectives.

Section 4: Courses for community and industry needs shows courses that do not correspond to occupations, such as foundation skill courses and courses that contribute to industry (but not specific occupations). While these courses are not directly linked to an occupation, they are nonetheless important because they support engagement and pathways.

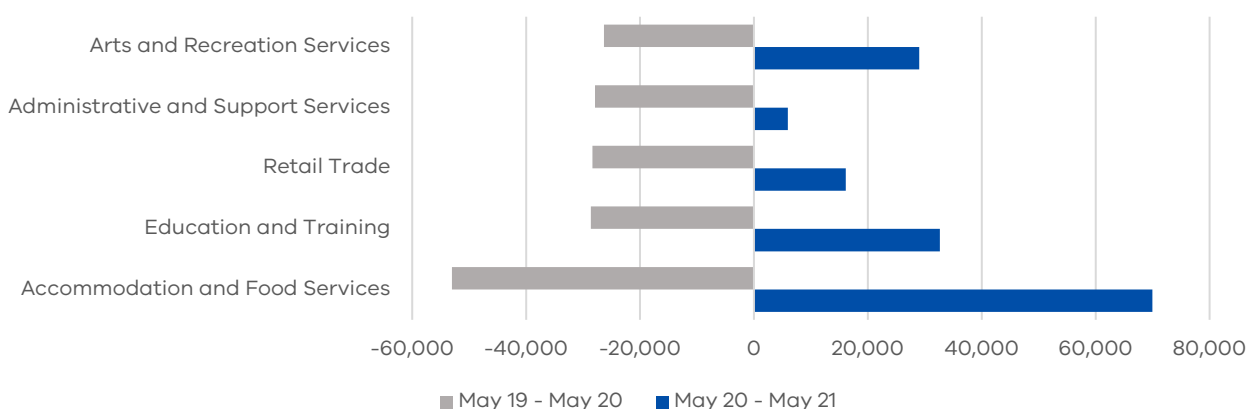

2: Victorian labour market context and outlook

THE LABOUR MARKET CONTEXT

The Victorian labour market has enjoyed a strong recovery from the unprecedented disruptions caused by COVID-19 in 2020. The level of employment (3.4 million workers) has recovered to its pre-pandemic level. The unemployment rate fell sharply to 4.4 per cent in June 2021, having peaked twice at 7.3 per cent in June and October 2020 (ABS). Victoria also recorded its highest workforce participation rate (66.8 per cent) in over 43 years in March of this year (ABS).

The job outlook continues to improve for Victoria as businesses once again look to hire. Job advertisement postings have grown strongly in recent months – surpassing their 2019 levels, as businesses adapt to COVID Normal. Employment in industries such as Accommodation and Food Services, and Arts and Recreation Services were most affected by Victoria's first lockdown. While employment growth in these industries has rebounded strongly over the past year as restrictions have eased, uncertainties regarding pandemic recovery and impacts on tourism from the ongoing closure of international borders will continue to affect their outlook (Figure 1).

Source: ABS, Labour Force, Australia, Detailed, May 2021

Note: Data is available on a quarterly basis

The recovery in these industries can also be observed through occupations, such as Waiters, and Bar Attendants and Baristas, which were some of the worst affected occupations but have rebounded strongly over the last year. Other occupations, such as Checkout Operators and Office Cashiers, are still seeing negative employment growth (Figure 2), which could be a consequence of the shift to online shopping during the extensive lockdowns over this period.

Figure 2: Employment growth by occupation, Victoria, May quarter 2019 to May quarter 2021

Note: Data is available on a quarterly basis

Across the State, females and younger workers were most impacted at the start of the pandemic by job losses (Figure 3). This is largely because women and young people were more likely to be employed in the industries that were hardest hit by COVID-19 (such as Accommodation and Food Services or Arts and Recreation Services) and more likely to have been employed on a part-time or casual basis.

The COVID-19 recovery reflects a reversal of this pattern (Figure 4), with larger rebounds recorded in cohorts that experienced larger negative impacts. For example, while women were initially more impacted by job losses than men in the early stages of the pandemic, they have had a stronger recovery over the past year. Metropolitan Melbourne showed larger rebounds across all cohorts, in the 12 months to June 2021, compared to the State.

Note: Data is available on a monthly basis

The TAFE and training system will continue to be pivotal in supporting economic recovery, by facilitating career transition to areas where there is job growth, enabling the acquisition of new skills by reskilling, and ensuring that people can improve their prospects of finding meaningful work. Increasing the skills of existing workers through upskilling will open more opportunities for individuals and help create a more productive workforce that can adapt to the changing requirements of industry.

LONGER-TERM OUTLOOK FOR OCCUPATIONS

While COVID-19 has caused significant disruption to the Victorian labour force, the Victorian workforce was already seeing considerable structural change. Over the past few decades, the economy's focus on manufacturing (such as the manufacturing segment of the Trades and Labour, and Storage and Transportation occupation clusters) has diminished and service-based industries (such as Clinician, Science and Engineering, and Marketing and Communications occupation clusters) have experienced rapid growth. This trend is expected to continue to play out over the coming decades with significant implications for both sector specific labour demands, but also the skills required and demanded to perform jobs changing over time¹.

Shifts in the population profile over the next decade will see an increase in the dependency ratio of Victoria – that is, the number of children (age 0 to 14) and aged people (age 65+) per hundred people of working age – from 52% in 2021 to 55% in 2031 (ABS). This has implications particularly for the health care and education sectors.

Changing demographics (and the services that the population will require as a result) are reflected in the strong employment growth projected for occupations in the Clinician cluster - characterised by skills required in medical settings - patient care, medical treatment, expertise in particular medical fields, which include doctors, nurses and carers. The Government is also making NDIS, family violence and mental health a priority, further increasing workforce needs. These priority workforces are closely linked to the Counselling and Support cluster – characterised by occupations with skills in mental health, case management and wider understanding of psychology, which is generally dominated by social and welfare professionals who work in the health care and social assistance industries.

Occupation clusters relating to construction and infrastructure, such as Science and Engineering, and Trades and Labour (driven by employment growth in construction, offsetting declines in manufacturing) are also projected to grow strongly over the next decade. This is driven by COVID-19 fiscal stimulus, low interest rates, and record infrastructure investments commitments by both State and Federal governments.

VET related employment accounts for close to 80% of the Trades and Labour occupation cluster and more than 50% of Science and Engineering², suggesting that a strong and efficient VET system will remain crucial to meeting future employment and skills needs.

² The Science & Engineering cluster comprises a variety of engineering, research and maintenance related occupations that are distributed across a range of industries – from mining to public administration. Some of the prominent VET related occupations include Electricians, ICT Support Technicians, Inspectors and Regulatory Officers, Medical Technicians, Metal Fitters and Machinists and Motor Mechanics.

TRAINING IN OCCUPATIONS ALIGNED TO GOVERNMENT OBJECTIVES

Table 1 presents the training demand outlook for the Metropolitan Melbourne region and Victoria, for occupations that are closely aligned with funded courses, and Table 2 presents the Funded Skill Sets.

In proposing Program Delivery Plans, training providers should assess which courses on their scope, within the ANZSCO Unit Groups, will best service the occupational training needs detailed below. Courses can appear under more than one ANZSCO Unit Group.

Detailed explanatory notes and guidance on how to read and interpret these tables is provided on page 33.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

- Australian and New Zealand Standard Classification of Occupations (ANZSCO): ANZSCO is a classification used to organise data collected about occupations. Definitions are based on the skill level and specialisation usually needed to perform the tasks of the specific occupation, or of most occupations in the group.
- VET related occupations: Occupations for which VET training supplies all or some new entrants, or VET training is undertaken to improve specific or generic skills for existing workers or new entrants in those jobs.
- Employment 2021 (Region): Estimated persons employed in the region in 2021, in occupations for which VET training supplies all or some workers, based on the Department's in-house employment forecasts.
- Anticipated training needs for 2022 (Region/State): Estimated requirement for all VET commencements in 2022 in the region based on total demand for VET training activity and current training patterns.
Note: In some instances, training requirements for a particular occupation are similar to, or greater than, the overall employment levels for that occupation in the region.³ This can happen for a number of reasons:
 - the occupation has a high staff turnover rate and requires a large number of entrants in the occupation to maintain employment levels
 - the occupation has mandatory licensing that requires new starters to obtain VET training
 - the region has a low historical course completion rate and requires a large number of students to commence in courses in order to fulfil the number of graduate entrants required⁴
 - training requirements include workers in occupations who participate in training and further studies to upskill.
- Priorities: Courses aligned to the National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS), Family Violence, Infrastructure, Free TAFE, JobTrainer and Apprenticeships are annotated. As high profile government initiatives, related job openings may increase more than the base anticipated employment demand across Victoria. Course alignment to government priority areas is reviewed on an annual basis to ensure currency. Training delivery aligned Apprenticeship courses are encouraged, irrespective of whether anticipated requirements for general (i.e. non-apprenticeship) courses are stable or decreasing.
- Data quality: While the Department has made every effort to compile reliable estimates of 2021 employment and 2022 anticipated training needs, the quality of these estimates can vary according to the timeliness and data quality of the inputs used to derive them. In some cases, providers may wish to supplement or replace these estimates with their direct local knowledge of labour market needs in their region.

GUIDELINES FOR USE

In proposing their Program Delivery Plans, training providers should assess which courses on their scope, within the ANZSCO Unit Groups, will best service the anticipated additional training needs.

Example 1

As indicated in Table 1, Agricultural Technicians (page 22) have a relatively low employment base in the region (200 workers). It is estimated that 100 to 200 commencements will be required in 2022 (Table 1).

The course most aligned with Agricultural Technicians is the Certificate IV in Conservation and Ecosystem Management. Training providers may wish to limit the number of places for this course in their Program Delivery Plans, due to the low anticipated employment demand, as explained above.

Example 2

As indicated in Table 1, Metal Fitters and Machinists (pages 27) have an employment base in the region of approximately 9,000. Around 2,300 to 3,000 new training commencements are anticipated for the region in 2022 to meet total training demand for this occupation.

Training providers may wish to include courses associated with this occupation in their Program Delivery Plans, taking into account the training range required. Several courses associated with Metal Fitters and Machinists can be delivered as apprenticeships, which are encouraged and permitted to have unlimited delivery (as indicated in the Priority column of Table 1).

The 2022 Funded Course List identifies courses by their delivery mode, so training providers should cross-reference this document with the Funded Course List.

Notes

Apprenticeships: Apprenticeship commencements are encouraged and no limits will be applied, due to the following specific needs of the occupations associated with these courses:

- long lead times - skills for these occupations are highly specialised and require extended training over three or more years, so the pipeline of apprentice graduates must be maintained irrespective of short term fluctuations in employment demand
- high use - skills are deployed for the uses intended, so there is a good occupational 'fit' between the course undertaken by the apprentice and the occupation
- high risk - disruption caused by skills being in short supply could impose a significant risk to the economy and/or community, particularly for occupations which have licensing and registration requirements.

Additionally, the rate of apprenticeship take up is closely related to available employment, given that apprentices and employers must enter into an employment contract. This promotes greater opportunities for ongoing employment once the apprenticeship is completed.

Region/State training indicators:

In some instances, occupations may display minimal anticipated additional training needs in 2022 at both the region and State level. Courses associated with these occupations may still appear on the Funded Course List 2022 and will therefore be government funded in 2022, in order to:

- cater for niche/thin market occupations which are important to the State or local economy and may require access to government funded training from time to time (including additional support from the Regional and Specialist Training Fund)
- allow for training in apprenticeship courses associated with those occupations, should there be demand
- maintain stability of the Funded Course List in cases where the demand for training varies from year to year but the associated courses still show high economic or community value to Victoria.

Training providers should still consider these courses in their Program Delivery Plans in conjunction with this information.

Impact of COVID-19 on employment forecasts and revisions to methodology

COVID-19 has had a significant impact on Victoria's economy and society. In particular, the closure of international borders is having ongoing effects on Victoria's population, with much lower than normal migration and therefore population growth expected in 2020-21 and 2021-22. An updated population profile, accounting for this expected slowdown, informs this year's employment projections. In addition, governments' responses to COVID-19 outbreaks, such as lockdowns and stimuli, will continue to impact the economy and employment outlook, causing volatility in the short-term estimates.

Deloitte Access Economics has also updated its forecast methodology. This year's forecasts incorporate land use data which allows for the validation of estimates for a particular industry and occupation at a specific location, thereby increasing its robustness.

Revision to Supply and Demand model methodology

As part of the Department's continuous improvement process, the modelling to support training demand estimates has been revised and enhanced. The improvements include better training supply pipeline forecasts, increased accuracy of location based estimates and the exclusion of apprenticeship training requirement estimates⁵.

⁵ Most apprenticeships take between 3-5 years of training to complete, and as such the anticipated training needs for the following occupations (for 2022) are not specified in Table 1: Sheetmetal Trades Workers, Panelbeaters, Vehicle Painters, Carpenters and Joiners, Glaziers, Plumbers, Electricians, Airconditioning and Refrigeration Mechanics, Binders, Finishers and Screen Printers, Printers, Cabinetmakers, Boat Builders and Shipwrights, Signwriters, and Insulation and Home Improvement Installers.

4: Courses for community and industry needs

Table 3 includes Foundation Courses, Vocational Certificate of Applied Learning (VCAL) and Victorian Certificate of Education (VCE) courses, and other courses that do not closely align to the ANZSCO Unit Group occupations detailed in Table 1 or Table 2, but are integral to Victorian community and industry needs. Training providers should also consider these courses when proposing their Program Delivery Plans.

Although courses included in this list may, on face value, appear to be aligned to an occupation, they do not provide direct pathways for students seeking to gain employment in a specific occupation, but may support upskilling for people already employed within a particular occupation. In addition, they:

- are generally courses with minimal units
- may be introductory or preparatory in nature
- may not be related to a specific occupation.

Note: Only courses included on the Funded Course List 2022 are listed.

Table 3: VET courses which are not strongly linked to occupation groups
